Te Moana (the ocean)

The ocean is one of the things that makes the rest of the world turn and take notice, it brings calmness and it eases my mind. The ocean belongs to everyone, without it no one would survive. Keeping the ocean clean is important because all ~~kind~~ kinds of animals live in it. Whatever we leave lying around will eventually lead to the ocean. Many animals suffer or die from the trash that's left behind. Most of trash found in Hawaii's ocean comes from the many different places of the world. The ocean is important ~~to~~ in Tokelau because most of the Tokelauan people live off of it. It's where most of their food and water comes from. The same goes for Hawaii. But it's important to keep Hawaii's ocean clean because we have a lot of sea creatures living underwater and polluting the ocean with trash is deadly for the animals. I learned a lot by watching the film. I learned that as many as 1,000 little plastic objects can be found in a bird's stomach. The birds and other animals mistake plastic objects for food. When they eat them it makes them starve because they think they're eating food but they're not. Plastics are harmful and hazardous ~~to~~ to all animals. I think by watching the film EVERYONE should know to be more curious to the animals. I think one way I can keep the ocean clean is by recycling the plastics and picking up trash around the beach area. People should take care of the ocean, preserve its beauty. Isn't that how we attract our tourists? go love the ocean and take care of it. =>
